Directed interests

and-bred director Bill Haney spoke to us this week about documentary, "The Last Run," which follows the fight of a small Appalachian community to win a coal-mining company from Robert F. Kennedy Jr. who also helmed 2007's "The Sugar" which explored the impact of a Haitian community harvest on the health of the region. He told us that despite the seriousness of his film topics, he can let loose. He is more than capable of zoning out in front of the television, especially if a game is on. "I'm watching Sox. I'm a pathological Sox fan. As a Bostonian, it's a great time to watch a pathological sports fan," he says. "When it comes to his work, he is attracted to weightier subjects. There are so many movies watching, or novels or documentaries that I like, and I'm delighted to spend hours on them — but I'm limited to spend two years on one project. I was satisfied to spend a year on "Mountain" which, he says, has made people angry and aware of the environmental issues. "I'm not sure if such mining communities are as common as they've been portrayed in the film in coal country, especially in the Northeast, but I'm especially excited to show it at home in Boston, where I grew up. I'm sure the issues are often educational, and curious. He will be at all Square Cinema tomorrow night. He will be at all Square Cinema tomorrow night. ## Dunn's death

"Jackass" star Ryan Dunn had a blood-alcohol content that was more than twice the legal limit when he and a passenger died in a fiery one-car crash this week in Pennsylvania, according to a toxicology report. Dunn's Porsche may have been traveling as fast as 140 mph in a 55 mph zone when it jumped a guardrail, flew into a wooded ravine, struck a tree, and burst into flames, police said. His blood-alcohol level was 0.196 at the time of the Monday morning crash, according to the toxicology report released yesterday by West Goshen Township Police. The legal limit for drivers is .08. ## Stars in Ponzi suits

"Spider-Man" star Tobey Maguire and other celebrities have been caught in a web of lawsuits seeking to reclaim more than $4 million won during unlicensed poker matches at upscale Beverly Hills hotels, court records show. The lawsuits were filed by a bankruptcy trustee attempting to recoup money for investors who were duped in a Ponzi scheme. The legal actions claim the clandestine Texas Hold'em matches were played between 2006 and 2009, with some of the money taken in the Ponzi scheme used to pay off debts incurred by its architect, Bradley Ruderman. Maguire is being sued for $311,000 plus interest that the lawsuit says was won from Ruderman. In all, 22 people have been individually sued to try to recoup money, including director Nick Cassavetes. (AP)

Glen Campbell has Alzheimer's

Country music legend Glen Campbell has been diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, and will put out his final album this summer. The 76-year-old singer's wife, Kim, told People magazine they wanted to go public with his illness because they wanted fans to know if he has trouble onstage. (AP)

Rowling to reveal 'Pottermore'

Harry Potter fans are holding their collective breath as author J.K. Rowling gets set to reveal her latest project involving the boy wizard. Rowling has called a news conference for today in London to reveal details of "Pottermore," a mysterious website that has been taunting fans with the words "coming soon." Theories include a Harry Potter encyclopedia, e-book versions of the novels, or an Internet-based game. Several British
