- Boston - Marblehead resident Marc White was appointed to Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston's Board of Overseers on Thursday, Dec. 2 during the organization's 114th annual meeting, held at the Westin Copley Place.

White is managing director and CEO for New England at J.P. Morgan Private Bank, where he is responsible for delivering the firm's broad capabilities in investing, wealth advising, family office management, philanthropy and credit to the region's high net-worth clients. He joined J.P. Morgan in 2005 with more than 25 years of experience in the financial-services industry.

Prior to this position, he worked as executive vice president and managing director of Fleet's Private Client Group, and as managing director of the New England region at Credit Suisse First Boston.

White's philanthropic activities include serving on the board of trustees at Tower School and the Citizens' Scholarship Foundation of Marblehead, and on the board of directors of the Keewaydin Foundation. He also served as a member of the executive and finance committee and board of trustees for the Wang Center.

White received a bachelor's degree from Hamilton College. He lives in Marblehead with his wife and three children.
